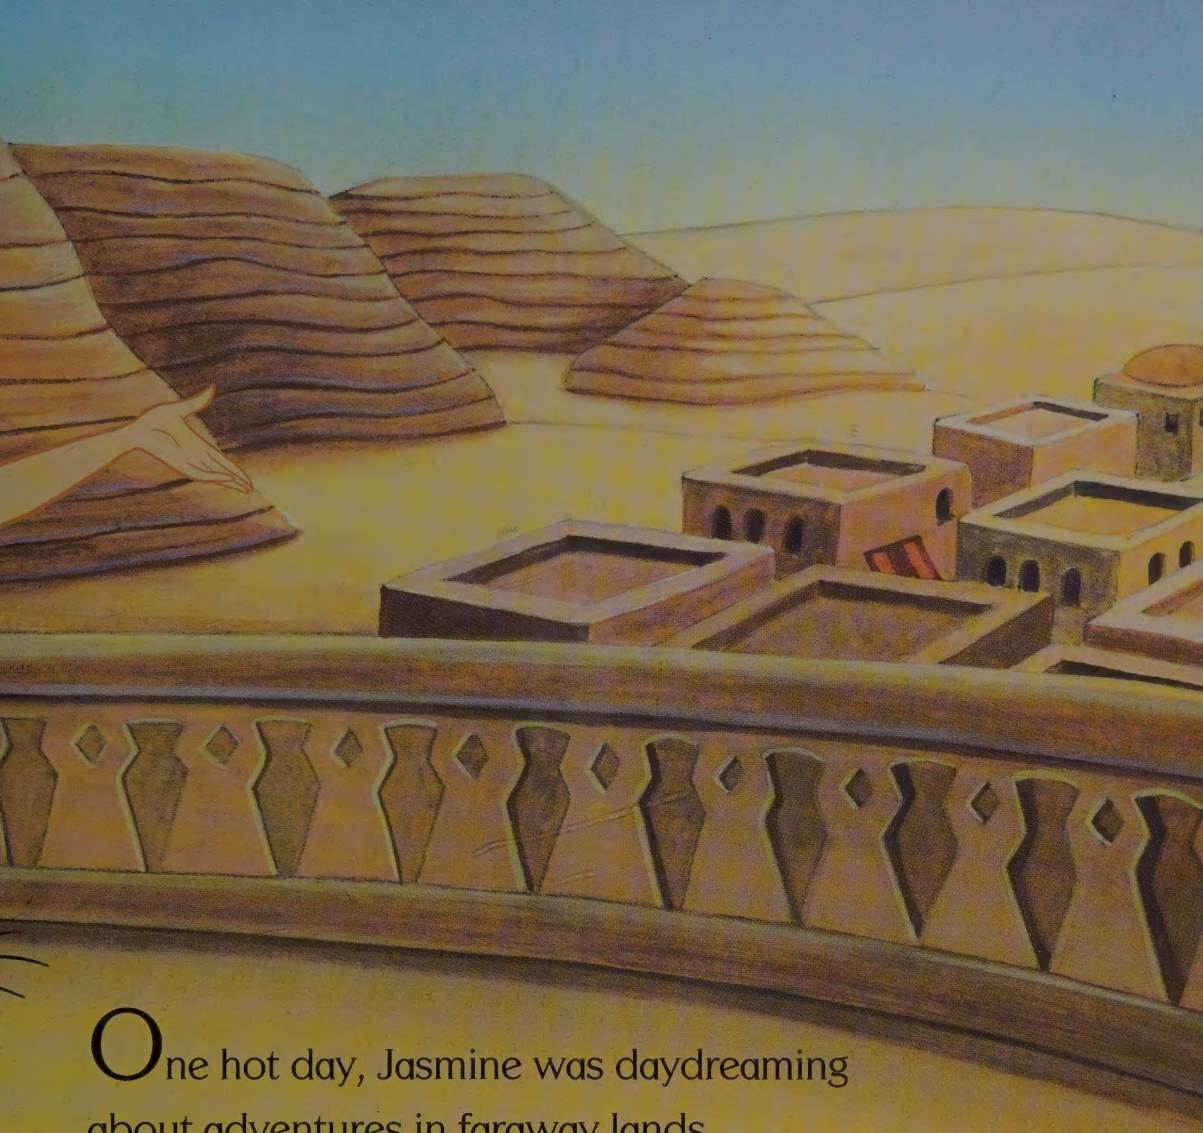
Disney's
Aladdin



One hot day, Jasmine was daydreaming about adventures in faraway lands.

"I wish I could see things that are different and new," said the princess to her pet tiger, Rajah.

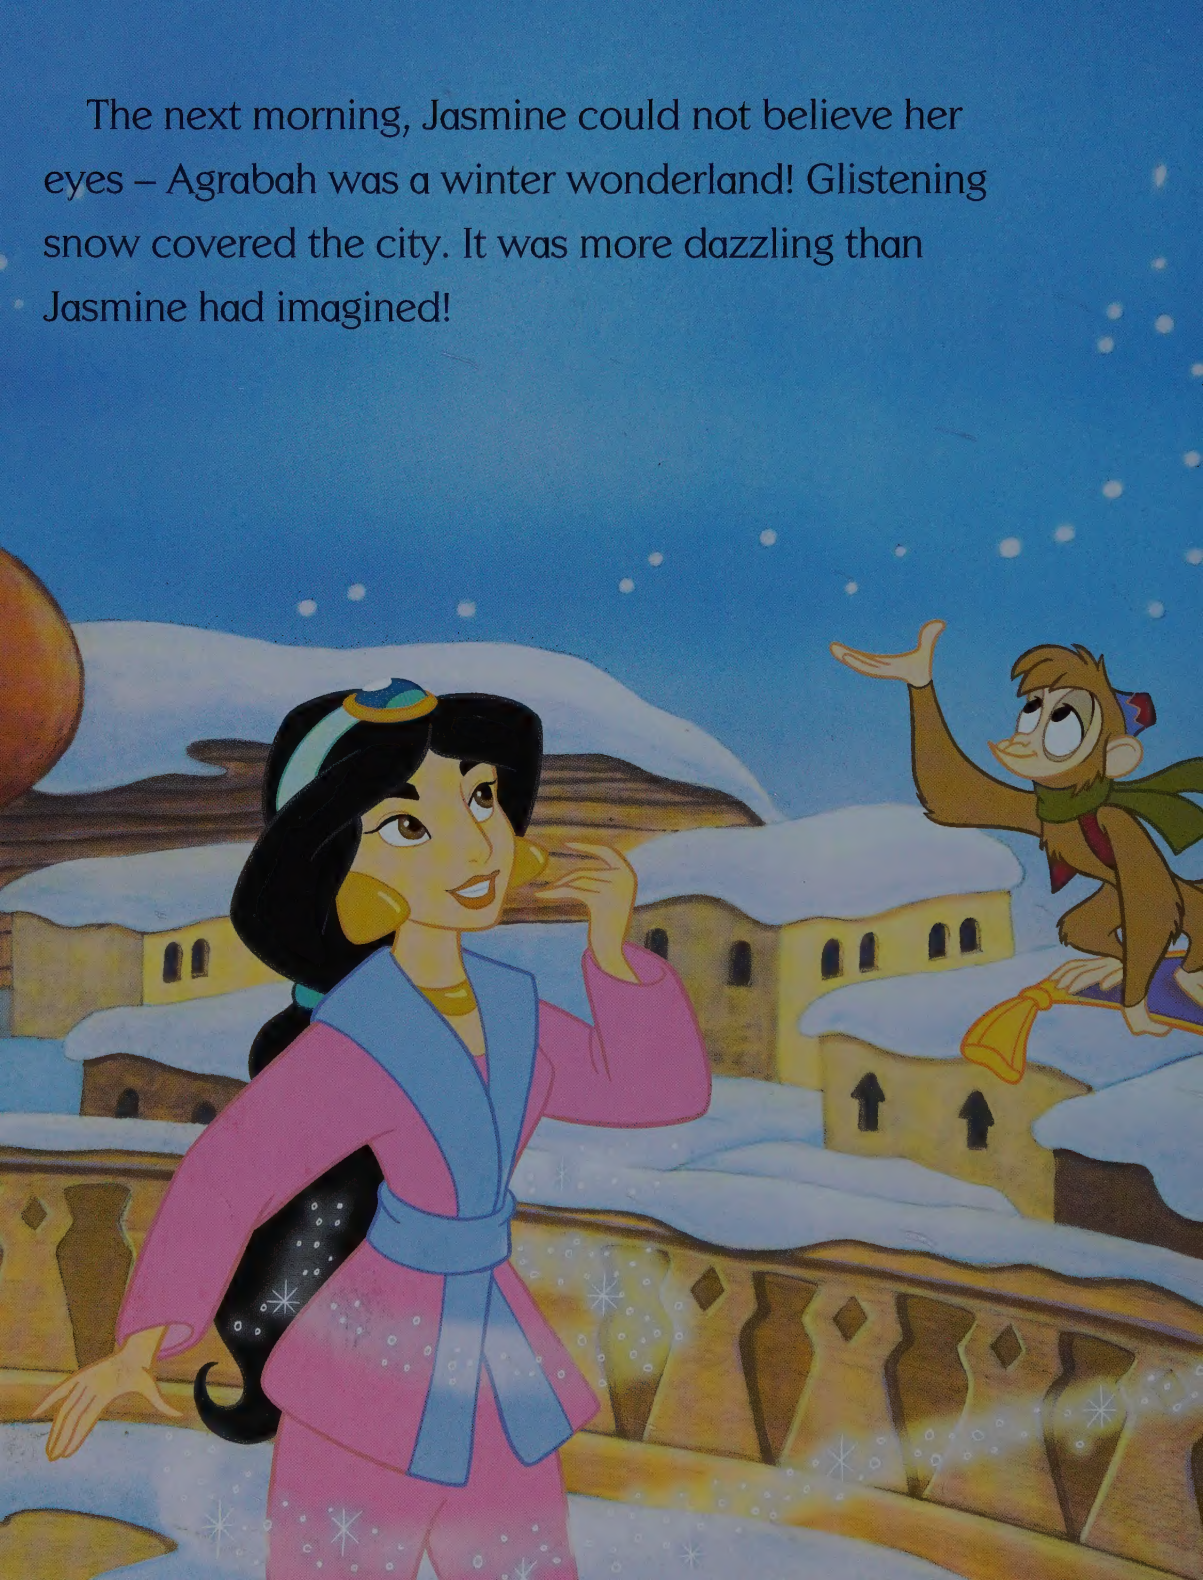
Just then, Aladdin flew towards the balcony on his Magic Carpet. He overheard the sad princess talking.

"Oh, Rajah, I wish I could see another world," said Jasmine. "A world with . . . snow!"

Aladdin wanted the princess to be happy, so he went to the Genie for help.

"I'm on the job, Al!" said the Genie. "With a poof, a puff, and a ta-da, I'll bring snow to Agrabah!"

The next morning, Jasmine could not believe her eyes – Agrabah was a winter wonderland! Glistening snow covered the city. It was more dazzling than Jasmine had imagined!



Suddenly Aladdin, Abu and the Genie appeared.

"Want to go for a ride, Princess?" asked Aladdin with a smile.

All bundled up, Jasmine jumped onto the Magic Carpet, ready for her snowy adventure.

"Welcome aboard the SS Snowbound," said the Genie. "We hope you enjoy your trip."

First, Jasmine, Aladdin and Abu hit the slopes, dashing down snow-covered pyramids.

"I'm a lean, mean skiing machine!" shouted the Genie.

Next, Aladdin and Abu built a giant snowman and Jasmine made her very own snow angel.

"Simply mah-velous!" exclaimed the Genie, admiring the silly works of snowy art.

A perfect winter day wouldn't be complete without a huge snowball fight!

"Heads up, Abu!" shouted Aladdin as a blizzard of snowballs zoomed past them.

Later that afternoon, Jasmine and Aladdin snuggled by a warm fire.

"What a splendid day!" exclaimed a very happy princess. "It was everything I dreamed it would be."

With a little magic and a lot of heart, Jasmine's snowy winter wish had come true.

Disney's
Beauty and the Beast

It was a chilly winter day, and the Beast had a cold. Belle tried to make him feel better.

"You must get well so you can enjoy the winter," she said.

"What's so good about winter?" the Beast grumbled.

"Oh, so many things!" replied Belle. "Especially ice-skating!"

"Master, you should really be a bit kinder to the girl," said Lumiere as Belle left the room. "She's only trying to help."

The Beast realized that he had been mean, so he decided to do something nice for Belle.

"I know!" exclaimed the Beast. "I have a beautiful scarf that I will give to her!"

Meanwhile, Belle was in the kitchen, baking.

"These gingerbread cookies always make me feel warm and cozy on a cold day," said Belle. "I'm sure they'll make the Beast feel better, too!"

While the cookies were baking, Belle headed outside to gather pinecones and holly berries.

"I'll bring the sights and smells of winter inside for the Beast to enjoy," said Belle.

Back in his chambers, the Beast put the final touches on Belle's gift. He wanted it to be perfect.

"Belle is going to love the scarf, Master," said Cogsworth.

"She can even wear it ice-skating," added Lumiere with a wink. "And perhaps you can join her?"

Just then, Belle knocked on the door. She was carrying a tray filled with freshly baked cookies and a lovely-smelling wreath to help the Beast feel better.

"Come in," said the Beast.

Belle entered and handed the Beast his goodies.
"Thank you for taking care of me, Belle," said the Beast.
He handed her the gift box, and she opened it eagerly.

"What a beautiful scarf!" exclaimed Belle. "How thoughtful!"

"It will keep you warm during the winter so you don't catch a cold," said the Beast with a smile.

When the Beast was feeling better, the two friends bundled up and went outdoors to have some winter fun. Belle taught him how to ice-skate, and before long, they were enjoying the snowy season together.
